

MANUSCRIPT POLICY

for

THE HISTORIAN

The Historian welcomes manuscripts submitted by historians and students of history throughout the world and from all regional, temporal and thematic fields of history. Submissions should be of interest to a wide readership not only in the fields of North American and European history, but also in African, Asian, Australian, and South American history. Manuscripts should meet the professional standards of academic journals, make a significant contribution in fact or interpretation, and use unpublished and primary sources as well as a broad range of relevant literature. Manuscripts that have been published elsewhere or that are being considered for publication elsewhere will not be considered by this editorial office.

Manuscripts should be between 6,000 and 8,000 words, exclusive of footnotes. The latter should be footnotes, not endnotes, and conform to The Chicago Manual of Style, 14th edition. Footnotes should be citations of quoted material rather than textual or bibliographical commentaries. Three copies of the completed manuscript, double-spaced with one-inch margins (right margin unjustified) are required for submission. The author's name should be included on title page only. Authors should also send a disk copy in IBM format plus a one hundred word summary abstract of the article.

Evaluation of manuscripts generally requires approximately four to six months, as submissions are referred anonymously to two specialists whose comments are reported by the editor to the author. We encourage inclusion of photographs, maps, and other illustrative material, which must be provided in camera-ready form, with authorization from copyright holders for these materials' reproduction in The Historian. Manuscripts are edited for organization, clarity, and consistency.
